

To the Editor:

Please, urge Larry Cohen post haste not to keep his New Year's Resolution to refrain from poking fun at us here at the Permanent Commission on the Status of Women! ("Promises, Promises", Dec. 28.) What would we do without Cohen, who frequently – if not obsessively – shines a light on our work and whose Paleozoic politics only strengthen our own resolve to continue working for women's economic security, health and safety? So by all means, bring it on; despite his protestations, Cohen clearly knows we're the State's leading force for women's equality. After all, women are used to bearing the misplaced attentions of men with crushes, and we are flattered – if slightly annoyed – by his dipping our curls into the inkwell once again.
