Bills # 6313 + 6312

My name is Helene Limpert of 63 Main St. North Stonington, Ct
I would like to begin by saying that for thousands of years people have consumed raw milk, and related raw milk and milk products like whey, butter, buttermilk, + cream. I am also a member of the Weston
A Price Foundation which promotes this "whole food" because of its natural healing properties. It is full of enzymes naturally that our body uses to digest. Pasturized milk has little to no enzymes.

I believe, pasturization causes, over time, lactose intolerance and milk sensitivity problems. Since consuming raw milk my own lactose intolerence has disappeared
My sons asthma problems are much better as well, he went from taking albuterol on a regular basis to just taking Advair. He rarely has a problem.

In this country we are becoming immune to antibiotics. We are so scared of bacteria that we come up with regulations like these 2 bills, that don't understand the whole concept of bacteria and pathogens.

Mark McAfee (a raw milk producer in the state of California) has said "Raw milk has a high propensity, a very good effect on limiting pathogen growth." In other words, there are many many different kinds of E coli. 95% of them are beneficial.
Without them you wouldn't have vitamins K, $B_1$, $B_2$, $B_6$, + $B_{12}$. E-coli is essential to life on earth and is an indespensible group of organisms in your intestines. This whole bacteria paranoia has gone way beyond out of control."

The regulations that you look at today are totally put forth, to put these small farmers out of business.

I cannot understand this, when the state of Conn has been saying they are promoting small farms, and eating locally

How many more kinds of farms is Conn. dept of Agriculture going to run out of business?

The Commissioner of the Dept. of Ag. said "he didn't think that there was any amount of testing that would be enough" Well, there is no amount of testing paturized milk that will be enough either.

These small farms are Conn's heritage, and they are growing and thriving. They wouldn't be thriving if people were not getting a huge benefit from it.

I urge you to reject these bills, as presented, they do not do anything but shut down family farms, we Connecticut will be true loosers.

Thank you for your time and consideration.

Respectfully,
Kellene Lempert
