Dear Senator Doyle,

After working in Hartford for 22 years and watching families trying to get ahead inspired me to write this letter. A good start in helping these families would be to raise the minimum wage. Not only will this help these working families it will also help revitalize the local economy. It goes without saying, once family necessities are taken care of, there would be more flexability to spend within the community.

As you know, the minimum wage has not increased in 4 years while other necessities have risen in cost. Connecticut has the highest cost of living, we need to do what other states have already done, raise minimum wage.

You have been elected to speak for the people, so I ask you to hear what the people who voted you into office are asking support raising the minimum wage.

Sincerely,
