After graduating from high school I decided to migrate to the United States to pursue my American dream. My aspiration was to go back to school and get my college degree, after leaving New York City to come to Connecticut to live with my family. I decided to attend the Gateway Community College for two years where I would get my Associate degree and move on to get my Bachelor degree in Human Services. It was the Pell grant that helped me to purchase my books, and other school supplies etc. If my pell grant is taken away from me, what will I do? My Pell grant is so important to me for my education! If I did not have access to the Pell grant that would lead to me having to discontinue my college education. This makes me sit and wonder about the educational system in the United States especially for our young people who want to further their education at a college level. We are talking about the young men and women of tomorrow. Would they be able to go to college after leaving high school if there are no Pell grants for students. At what level would this country be able to advance in the area of high Technology, which is in high demand. We are already way behind compared to other countries like China and Japan. Without a proper college education our children would not be able to compete against other countries that are more advanced in Technology and other fields right now. I am asking the Government to sit back and really think about these decisions they are making concerning the life of our young people of this country. This is a vital area that you are thinking of cutting please consider the devastating consequences of these cuts, I beg you!
