Chris,

I am a former Kaynor Graduate. I graduated from the body trade and have used my education to further my career.

After graduating, I worked in several body shops in the Waterbury area, worked my way up to body shop foreman in a Terryville, Ct Body Shop. Continued on to become an Adjustor and Appraiser for Allstate Ins. Co. Eventually I opened my own independent Adjustor and Appraiser Business, serving Connecticut and Mass.

Presently I am retired and volunteer my services for the testing of Seniors in the Body Trade at the Trade School.

These schools are best left under state jurisdiction rather than the local towns or cities. I understand that Connecticut is in a financial bind, however, these students who benefit from this education are the ones who will lose out if given to the cities.

Just for your info, the following members of my family have attended a State Technical School: My wife's brother, my nephew, my son in law and my grandson is presently a Freshman @ Oliver Wolcott State Tech.

I know this letter is late, however, was out all day and just got to my email.

The system works , don't mess with it is my motto.

Thank you for your time,
