

This is crucial to the survival of the merchants and city of New London. New London is a destination point for many, however, parking is an issue in the city and deters people from coming. Having weekend transportation stops in New London would only improve the economic development of a once thriving city with galleries, music, fine dining, and local retail business that would all benefit from increased traffic. Not to mention that those who would like to come to the lovely city of New London would not have to worry about parking.

Jamie Lee
Mystic, CT