Team Engagement Activity: Construct Card Towers and Build a House of Character™
Evidence-Based¹: Experiential Learning Inspiring Achievement for Greater Life Outcomes.

Communication

Using critical thinking strategies, teams discuss which character traits are the most important for their teams foundation.

Collaboration

With inquiry-based learning people share ideas that promote collaborative problem solving and trust in decision making to build a strong foundation.

Creative Problem Solving

Innovative "hands-on" team building creates a risk friendly atmosphere where people rise to the occasion and learn how to work together.

Teamwork

It takes higher order thinking and courage to build the third floor and be energized in the fun of rebuilding if (usually when) it falls down.

Reflection & Presentation

Teams share which character traits are on their House of Character™ foundation. You can see it in their eyes that it builds new meanings and a sense of pride in teamwork and their collective achievement.

The FUN of Learning

How to build 21st century workforce capacity, resilience for even stronger teams and models of leadership for greater life outcomes for all.

Help Youth Work Through Life Issues

Use GIANT size ways to get their attention and engage in experiential learning

Struggling to get middle level students to talk about their everyday life issues?

"I am always looking for different ways to help students work through issues. I found it's a really cool, fun way [for students] to learn about themselves. It's a different approach, to talking about core values. I get a lot of positive feedback. They are engaged right away. It becomes a fun activity for students to interact with each other."

"The students are more willing to participate because it is a movement activity and your giant cards [The World's Kindest Playing Cards™ in The Educational Kindness™ Leadership Tool Kit] are a great way to be interactive and work through issues."

Workshops improving educational outcomes

Creating positive energy in schools and work

"It was very successful," said the Assistant Superintendent of Curriculum and Instruction. Very positive outcomes to improve school climate were indicated by the School Climate Team at the April 2011 Train of Trainers GivaGeta workshops. Each PBIS team analyzed and reviewed their TIC and SET results. The team then came up with next steps for their school's PBIS team focusing on tier I, II and III interventions.

Creating Successful and Sustainable Interventions

"It was incredible because there was so much synchronization of what Dr. Sugai said about PBIS and Jim Cantoni's GivaGeta Train the Trainer workshop presentation. It was very positive and interactive." ~ School PBIS team member

PBIS GivaGeta Workshop Survey Results:

95.4% (124 of 130) of the School Climate Team learned how to:

- Build community by focusing on the positive
- Teach students how to create a positive and constructive climate in school
- Use the materials for Positive Behavior Interventions & Supports
- Educate the whole person and infuse character education into existing curriculum
- Use the materials to reduce the chances of bullying
- Use the materials to develop skills for the 21st Century in students
- Get students to interact and learn from each other
- Get students and teachers to interact and learn from each other

How the story began ...

GivaGeta Smiles™

Give a Smile ... Get a Smile™ ... GivaGeta™

In 1971 ... it all started with a little girl named Jackie who at six years old would dot the "i" in her name with a special smiley. Her parents encouraged her to return kindness and write thank you notes, in which she would share her smile.

Fast forward sixteen years. Boy meets girl. In 1992, Jim and Jackie marry and soon after are blessed with two boys. In September 2003, Jackie asks Jim, "What do you think about spreading more smiles with my smiley?" Two months later on Thanksgiving Day, Jim adds "Give a Smile ... Get a Smile ... GivaGeta" and they name the smiley "GivaGeta Smiles".

In 2005, their nine year old son, Jimmy Jr., whose nickname since he was about 6 years old is "Einstein Jr.", came up with the idea of a memory match game and to put the first of these 27 catchy, positive and kind words called "GivaGeta Kindness Messages" on playing cards. In 2010, we learned Jimmy was born on Einstein's birthday.

In 2009, to bring smiles to children with special needs, the GivaGeta Foundation was created in honor of their son Nathan.

Jackie and Jim Cantoni are very grateful as The GivaGeta Collection of national award winning, evidence and strength based experiential Leadership Tool Kits and nine editions of The World's Kindest Playing Cards™, Positive Pen™ Positive Pencil™ and more by GivaGeta Smiles™ are inspiring potential for greater life outcomes and helping strengthen kids, families, teams, leaders in business and communities in over 45 states and 27 countries who make our diverse world a kinder place.

Teach how to forgive

With the triumph of the general theory [of Relativity], more than two centuries of certainties were swept away. Proud of his achievement but conscious of his debt to his great predecessor, Einstein wrote: "Newton, forgive me."

Lacayo, Richard. Albert Einstein, The Enduring Legacy of a Modern Genius TIME, 2011.

Anti-Bullying, improving school climate and positive youth development initiatives all have the same common goal of teaching kids to be kind, respectful and responsible to end mean spirited behavior and act with integrity.

GivaGeta Smiles™ helps build capacity by teaching kids around the world to learn how to forgive others and themselves so they can move on with their lives.

Foster Resilience:

Use The Educational Kindness™ Leadership Tool Kit and tell a campfire story that teaches heartfelt forgiveness in a fun and memorable way that would make Einstein smile.

Theory of Relatives™

Fun Fact:

The Theory of Relatives™ was introduced by GivaGeta Co-Founder Jim Cantoni in a keynote speech January 2010 which was about 1 1/2 years prior to knowing about Einstein asking Newton's forgiveness - coincidentally about his Theory of Relativity. Notably, the keynote was not his best, and Cantoni asked for forgiveness.
