

Dear Committee Members,

Common Sense tells me that the first problem with free public education is the word FREE. Anything free does not have the meaning of value.

More money will produce the same results, if you're lucky a little better, but not what you expect, since it hasn't so far.

Keep doing the same things and you'll get the same results.

Education has to become the expensive privilege it is. Then you have a good starting point. I am not suggesting to abolish the free public education system but to change the perception.

Look at what happens when young people go to college and the parents have to pay for it! THEY GET INVOLVED!

Sincerely,
Rita Gruener
