My name is Bob Nason and I work for Dutch Oil Company in Moodus, CT. I am concerned about CT levying yet another tax on the already inflated price of home heating oil. Many home owners that I speak to, find it difficult to pay their home heating bills as a result of already rising oil prices. It is unfair to tax these people simply because of the type of fuel required to heat their home. Why should these people be segregated and taxed for a basic need that others are not being taxed on? It is equivalent to taxing food or other essential human needs. It is wrong, and immoral to penalize these residents. It is also not in the tax payer's best interest to have the utility companies own the final word on what this money is used to fund. This is blatant support of special interests and not a fair means to fund the utility company's projects. It gives yet another unfair advantage to the utility company putting even more pressure on local oil companies to explain to our customers why this tax is being levied on them. It is unfair, and it is un-American.
