

As a mother of a 17 year that took the Safety course for boating last summer I oppose online education for boaters. (as well as for hunting licenses)

Although I understand nothing can prevent a accident, being on the water is dangerous. Reading it over and over will not prevent recklessness or teach safety procedures with hands on demonstrations. It is important to keep the training to a classroom for everyone's safety.

If you want to have renewals online I can understand, I wish to keep the initial class in a classroom setting.

Sincerely from a mother of a young adult who has had proper training before entering the water,
