

I strongly oppose the pending legislation that would allow on-line boating safety courses. Sitting in real classroom with professional instructors drills into heads of new boaters valuable lessons that might someday save their life or that of a fellow boater. A classroom test insures that the test taker him or herself knows the material cold! Otherwise you should also pass a law requiring these on-line test takers to bring their boating safety book with them while underway so in the event of a true emergency they can "Look Up" what they need to do!

Paul Bezruczyk

Paulbezruczyk@gmail.com