As a former advocate of children, and now a mom and my children's advocate, I say no to the SB 374 bill. I feel it violates the right of the parents to choose what is best for their child as an individual. I feel that subjecting them to a series of probing questions is not going to help them. But an adult who cares, knows them and listens will make all the difference. Training adults to be attentive to a child's needs and be good listeners may be a better solution.
