

I would love to see the State of CT recognize the farms that are left. In the day, CT was known for all the working dairy farms and it is appropriate that they should receive some recognition of all of their hard work. I am not sure many citizens realize having a dairy farm (or any farm, sheep, goats, horses, alpachas, llamas) is so demanding and hard, getting up early every day. The State is still known as having the largest number of horses per square mile than any other state. It is sad to see the farms disappearing all over the country. Perhaps recognizing them would enable them to show off their animals, products such as the sheep, goat, alpachas, llamas with wool products, etc some dairy farms sell their own milk and cheese products. This would help them to survive a little longer and easier.

I vote for approval of S.B. 311 to allow approval to designate some of notable farms thesfor signs off on the highways to certain farm related designations on highways signs.

Have a great day!
