

Dear Sirs,

A a New Haven taxpayer of almost 30 years, I am tired of paying the bulk of supporting non-profits that choose New Haven as a base but serve a much larger community of towns surrounding us. They benefit from the non-profits, the most famous of which are Yale University and Yale-New Haven Hospital, but do not have to support them. Therefore their property taxes are lower. They also have high paying jobs in New Haven but do not pay toward the property tax.

The State of Connecticut should either reimburse New Haven for these lost property taxes through the Pilot program.

Daniel C. Moore, M.D.