

Please pass this bill to help people with autism who can no longer attend school. My friend has a daughter with severe autism who is concerned about the services that will be available to her family once Rachel is too old to attend the school she is in now. Families with autism feel an incredible strain in their daily lives that we can not even imagine. This strain does not disappear when their children grow up; they still need to be cared for. Improving services to older people with autism will benefit a wide range of citizens.

Thank you for your support.
