I am a psychologist in private practice and a consultant at a child clinic, and I am in favor of expanding services for ASD individuals. This is a population that has always needed ongoing support especially when they age out of school based support. My concern has been that there are few services related to housing support, vocational training, emotional support, and support for families of adults with ASD. Adult mental health services are poorly trained and generally unprepared to step up services as these individual's age out of school programs.
