

To Whom it May Concern,

Please consider my opinion in favor of allowing bow hunting on private land on Sundays in Connecticut. Although I personally do not participate, it is clear to me that . . .

- 1) Bow hunting is increasingly popular.
- 2) The deer herd is abundant and can easily support modestly increased hunting pressure.
- 3) The land is private and its owners should be able utilize it in any way that is not detrimental to the community as a whole.
- 4) The prohibition against Sunday hunting is as outdated as the recently reversed prohibition against liquor sales on Sunday.
- 5) Even incrementally increased hunting would generate increased revenues and would make Connecticut a more attractive place for weekend recreation.
- 6) I see absolutely no negatives to weigh against the positives.
