

Dear Gentlemen,

When a State has to resort to these types of measures, allowing easy access to gambling on line it is because they have exhausted all intelligent means of reducing spending, trimming the State's wasteful line-by-line budget it is a very sad day for representation and democracy. They wind up hurting the most vulnerable taxpayers. Why don't you "Man Up" and go line-by-line in your Budgets and see which items could be more efficiently done by private enterprise?

Resorting to On Line gambling to bridge the budget and spending gaps is akin to a thirsty man drinking sea water. it might seem to help the immediate problem but in the end it only makes matters worse.

Stanley thal