

Dear Sirs,

I am totally against the idea of allowing online KENO betting or online gambling of any kind for CT. The income it may produce for the state is at the expense of less educated and usually poorer people who are desperate and will lead to misery of some families for sure. Online gambling in the middle of the night at home is much more convenient and addictive than having to get in the car and drive to a casino. Which I also think are not a good idea.

Addictions to online gambling are so easy to form, and can lead to people losing their homes or other gracious debts leading to tax payers having to provide government financial support. Think of those children impacted!

It even one or two families have their lives ripped apart, was it worth the tax revenue? Is that Connecticut that type of state?

Thank you for voting against this bill.

Tamara Upham