Choice is one of the fundamental tenets of America

In our lifetime we've had lots of choices – schools attended, places lived, jobs we took, the person we married, the friends we enjoy, where to spend our retirement years, etc., etc. etc. Should we not continue to have a choice as our lives come to an end? That's the purpose behind the Aid in Dying law that is being considered now by the Connecticut legislature. But it is not unbridled choice. You make this important choice, given certain parameters. The bill applies only to those who are terminally ill with six months or less to live and are mentally competent. A doctor must give her approval and be involved.
