

I am writing in opposition to the idea of a border toll.

We are already one of the most heavily taxed states in the country. Is adding yet another cost to the residents of this state really what we need?

How about the Legislature get its house in order and restrain spending and balance the budget the way families all across this state do every day, instead of continually coming up with new and creative ways to confiscate income from Connecticut residents?

It's well past time that the Legislators in this state step up and be the leaders and make the tough decisions they are elected to make. It's time to be honest with Connecticut residents that we can't afford to continue spending as we have and begin the process of shrinking the government.

If not, then businesses and residents will continue to move to North Carolina and Texas.
