

Quick fixes will not help our state in the long run and we need long term solutions to improve our economy. We need jobs that are stable for the long term that contribute to the growth of our state population and not just to gambling enterprises.

With the overnight closing of an important parking garage at the Stamford Transportation Center after years of turning a blind eye to the increasing structural problems it is will on time to start the work of rebuilding Connecticut and not increasing an industry that is not healthy, does not promote the state of Connecticut in a healthy way and does nothing to contribute to our long-term economic health.
