

Just say "NO!" to Keno. Legalizing KENO would be a "blight" on our state. Brightly lit KENO screens, with bouncing balls and flashing lights, would mimic the affects of cigarette advertising, i.e. exposing minors to what may appear to be an attractive electronic game. It's not about gambling as much as it is about Connecticut, our quality of life, our citizens and our families. These KENO screens, in states that allow them, are often in restaurants, bars, and other public places, where they dominate the scene. We don't need to trash our public environment and our quality of life to satisfy gamblers, or to fund our state budget.
