V. FEDERAL ELECTION COMMISSION

GAE Committee Public Hearing
Monday March 2, 1pm

Chairman Jutila, Chairman Cassano, Members of the Government Administration and Elections Committee, I am thrilled to have the opportunity to submit my personal testimony in support of H.J. 64 Resolution.

On February 26, 2015 we came close in loosing the free and open internet as we know it today. Big cable and telecommunication companies such as Comcast and Verizon took full advantage of the legalized bribery to oppose FCC regulations that would prohibit the creation of slow lanes for uncaptitized websites and online content. This not only posed a threat to innovation but also had the opportunity to give these major companies monopoly power. The fight for net neutrality was not an easy one. Money in politics played a huge role, and the fight for net neutrality would've been lost if it wasn't for internet companies and start-up investors to use the same rigged system in favor of net neutrality. Although, this fight had a good outcome, it leads me to worry about the future of our nation. As a current chemical engineer student and web developer, I want the United States to lead the world in scientific and technological advancements but this can't be done under a treacherous legal system that has the potential to halt human advancements that lead to progress all for the sake of corporate profit. I here end my testimony fully in favor of the H.J 64 Resolution.

Sincerely,
Javier S. Guerrero
