

If tolls are to be installed, then they should include the entire state, not selected regions, which I believe would be discriminatory to those of us who live on state borders.

How much would this really help the budget in Connecticut, do you also realize it would also keep people from other states that come into Connecticut for there needs to go elsewhere, especially those of the residents that do border us. I believe that most business that are on the border in Connecticut would be and should be very upset at even the thought of placing tolls on our stateliness. We're supposed to help the businesses not drive them out. We lost enough and it's time to concentrate non bring more business into Connecticut, which will create jobs, housing, and the budget.

Thank you for reading this,

Angie Fontana

Sent from Windows Mail