

I am writing to voice my opposition to tolls at Connecticut's borders. We have already been there and done that. Beside the traffic tie-ups and problems associated with the tolls, and then being taken out with all the new revenue when the first casino came to Connecticut, we have to consider how such tolls would discriminate against those residents who live near a state line.

Connecticut is one of the few states with such high taxes and $ coming in from casino earnings. Yet, there never seems to be an end to seeking more $. This would be just another contribution to a reason for new graduates to leave CT!

Michele Eldred
North Stonington, CT