

I love to travel worldwide and my goal is to see every state in our country....except those states who have not committed to be ivory free. One of my greatest travel experiences was seeing the amazingly large, profoundly intelligent elephants of Africa and Asia. Killing those magnificent animals for the material from which their tusks are made, especially in this age of plastics when the material can be duplicated without killing a single animal, is unacceptable.

I hope to be able to eventually visit CT, after you take the morally responsible step of banning ivory.

Thank you.
