

My husband and I just read about the proposed legislation to fine persons and sentence them to prison for having any possessions made of ivory as a component. We can certainly understand the purchase of NEW items being banned. The ivory trade is despicable. But to penalize a person who already has family treasures, most likely passed down from ancestors, is incomprehensible. What good does this do? I hope you take note of this objection to this proposed legislation.

Nancy Trevor and the Trevor Family