

Hello,

I would like to voice my opposition to any ban on ivory. I believe this to be a waste of resources and detrimental to musicians and firearms enthusiasts as well as other collectors of fine artifacts.

If you want to help the elephants then I would suggest educating the population about the success of managed hunting programs. These laws have been instrumental in saving the wildlife populations in the United States from commercial hunters. Similar laws would work where elephants exist as well. In fact, the only countries that have healthy, viable elephant populations are countries that manage hunting of these majestic animals.

Thank you very much
Rick Conner