

The Affordable Housing 8-30g law needs to change.

The effect of the affordable housing proposals in Milford would bring tremendous disruption to the existing neighborhoods.

Zoning and Planning's rulings to turn down these projects have been challenged by the developer's attorneys every time. This is a huge expense for Milford to hire attorneys to defend their decision. Connecticut has always had a strong tradition of local governance. The agenda by the state is clearly not what the people of this town wants.

The density of these development proposals would bring overwhelming financial harm to the home owners in these cities and towns. Besides the fact that in these weak economic times for Connecticut, you would have additional expenses in the form of roads and schools to our already high property tax rate.

Gov. Malloy put $500 million of state money in a fund for the developers, and this is money the state can't afford.
