While I am blessed with a defined benefit package, the fact that I am taxed twice on benefits earned through my 40 plus years of contributing to social security is appalling. Seniors have a difficult enough time trying to live on the meager wages earned over the years of paying into social security. They should not be penalized by having to pay into the system again. Filing your taxes can be a daunting task as it is it now but to have to report more income to the government in the form of W2 earnings on social security is at the very least troubling if not borderline criminal.
