I don't believe that taxing Social Security should be an option for raising revenue in the State when the state has been reluctant to work on reducing what I consider "off market" benefits for state employees. Every retiree I know has had to kick in with higher insurance premiums, high deductibles and copays etc from their company benefit plans. Non increases in pay have been had by many working people for the last few years either. We need to "man up" and address reality.
