I am currently 60-years and preparing for retirement. Most likely I will wait till my full social security age (66&1/2) before I retire. Although I love Connecticut, I will forced to retire in another state due to the incredibly high taxes in this state (property/income/sales). I think this state will be seeing a mass migration of baby-boomers like myself to other states because of the high cost of living here. I think this mass migration will have a negative impact on the state and hope that state government will finally work to reduce taxes in this state for all of its residents. (Not just retirees!)
