

Paul Salva
pedipulm@att.net
Somers, Connecticut 06071

Connecticut is one of only a few states that has this tax. It is one of the many things that drive people out of this state. This state taxes people their entire working lives and then continues to tax them in retirement. Does the legislature want the entire state to empty out and move to Florida? Does it want the state to back to 100% forest land? How can the legislature tax senior citizens like this? Aren't they a special part of the electorate? The legislature talks a good game about wanting to protect seniors. How about stop taking their money?