To all concerned

We are not the only state coping with budget deficits. My brother lives in Illinois a state far worse than Connecticut in regards to money deficits. Yet they just approved for any veteran 70 percent disabled and higher full exemption from property tax. We certainly at the least can have some compassion on the elderly who live longer and their once sufficient social security checks have lost purchasing power in goods and services. To have social security checks tax exempt will boost their purchasing power giving relief even in this tough economy. Thank you for giving this issue discussion hoping this will pass giving relief to those we love.

Thank You
