

Charles Watson
cnwatson1@comcast.net
Westbrook, Connecticut 06498

For people whose sole income is Social Security, the Social Security income should not be taxed. Others, however, should follow the federal standard and pay a graduated tax on their Social Security income in proportion to their additional (non-Social Security income). In higher tax brackets, all Social Security income should be subject to state and federal income tax.