Subject: DMV Testimony

Having recently been to the hell that is the DMV, outsourcing would help take some of the pressure off the poor people who work there. One major problem they have is the new system that was purchased (despite lawsuits by other states who had already found it worked very poorly). The old system worked well, according to DMV employees. Since it worked well by all accounts, why spend all that taxpayers money?

Will this save money or is it just a way to speed things up? I would only support this idea if it saves money. I can stand in line if it will save any expenses at the state level.
