To Whom it May Concern,

Referencing the above stated bill numbers, my husband and I wish to go on record as commending these bills and supporting their passage . It has been a long, arduous, unnecessarily prolonged process bantering with the bureaucratic 'powers' (State and Federal) in an attempt to convince them of the negative effect the railroad path would have on our communities . Considering that this is taxpayer funds that create the possibilities of change to the system, it certainly follows that the taxpayers themselves should have the final say including the necessity of any and all studies which are deemed to be necessary prior to making said decisions. Some of these studies are perhaps expensive and unnecessary given the fact that the public is objecting to the proposals as conceived currently.

Thank you for considering these important bills.

Sincerely,
Susan Robert-Basil, Stephen Basil
