Good morning,

I'm writing today to express my support of an encourage passage of the National Popular Vote here in CT.

It seems to me to be common sense that the president should be elected by the will of the people. Simple. The candidate with the most votes wins.

The current system fails us where "battleground" states get time, energy and resources, not to mention the campaigning efforts where people can actually hear the candidates live and in their own words. This almost never happens here in CT.

We need to join the other states that have already made NPV a reality in their states. Thank you for your consideration.
