

This is my view on end-of-life care.

The State has no business telling people how and when to die. If a person is suffering because of an ailment and there is no hope for improvement he/she should be able to determine that he/she wants to end his/her life. People are entitled to euthanizing just as animals are when there is no hope for improvement.

I support this compassionate option.

Sincerely,
John F. Lenard at Storrs, CT