

Bill 457 and Bill 7381 do not support forced redistricting of school systems. People who pay taxes to a town should enjoy the benefits. Wealthy towns living next to low income towns shouldn't be forced to support schools in the lower income towns. Most people with any type of income have done whatever they could to move their families out of low income areas to avoid having their children attend low income schools. Forcing people in higher income towns to support the schools of lower income towns will only make people leave Connecticut entirely. I know this falls on deaf ears of Democrats, but keep it up. Sooner or later your tax base will be only state/city workers and people on welfare. Good luck balancing the budget.
