Explanation

The bill allows eligible state employee members of the Teachers' Retirement System (TRS) to stop making the 1.25% TRS retiree health contribution. This could result in an annualized revenue loss of less than $600,000 to the Teachers' Retirement Fund (retiree health account) in FY 20 and FY 21 to the extent that state employee members of the TRS¹ no longer have to make the contribution toward retiree health insurance. The exact number of TRS members who are eligible to stop contributing as a result of the bill is not known at this time.

The bill has no fiscal impact to the Teachers' Retirement Board (TRB) retiree health accounts, which fund the state's one-third share of the TRB retiree health plan and retiree health subsidy. The active teacher contributions of 1.25% fund one-third of the TRB retiree health plan and two-thirds of the retiree health subsidy. The FY 18 total active teacher contribution resulted in $51.5 million in revenue to the retiree health account. State employees in the TRS represent approximately 1% of the total active membership and contributed approximately $600,000 to the retiree health account.

Senate "A" strikes the underlying bill and results in the fiscal impact shown above.
