

I think early voting and no excuses voting are horrible ideas. No excuses means somebody is too lazy to go and vote. If someone has a valid excuse for an absentee ballot that is a different story and perhaps the excuses need to be broadened somewhat.

Early voting short circuits important periods of campaigning and allows people with preconceived opinions to vote without seeing all available material about the candidates. It is another form of laziness and perhaps intellectual laziness at that.

Now, 24 hour voting on election day is a good idea and should be pursued. Also, wherever possible within the limitations of the US Constitution (first Tue. after first Mon. in November--- what a joke!), WEEKEND VOTING would be a great idea.
