I support changing the statutes of limitations on sexual abuse crimes. The current law is not fair or just. This type of crime creates victims that are not able to see the hurt until many years later. That's the nature of sexual abuse.

I am a victim of clergy sexual abuse. It took me 25 years to finally ask for help w depression , anxiety and low self esteem. Failed relationships and job attempts. All of it stemmed from the abuse.

I should be able to sue for the usual things, like any other citizen who has been wronged. Pain and suffering. Lost wages. Medical expenses. Reimburse for counseling services. But the statutes prevent justice in this area.

Other states have been WAY more progressive in this area and I think CT should "step up" too.

The Statutes here in CT really need to be abolished for this type of injury.
