

To Whom it Concerns,

It is necessary to express my utmost concern and objection to any bill that would remove any US citizen's right to religious and medical choice. The State of Connecticut must protect the rights of the people to practice religious freedom and beliefs for oneself and have authority over oneself's medical course of action. Is it not a person's right to refuse medical procedures when in hospital? The administration of injecting lab made vaccines into one's body is never to be required or mandated by ANY government establishment in this country. This is a direct violation of our freedoms as citizens of the United States of America. Religious exemption from medical procedures absolutely needs to be protected.

In God We Trust,

Jennifer Tetreault
of
Meriden, Connecticut