

I support bill SB 972 to open birth records to adults who either desire to know their birth parents or who have concerns about their genetic background. Since DNA testing can change a person's life outcome possibilities, Connecticut needs to allow adoptees to identify their birth parents. Many states have already passed similar legislation. I see no reason for denying it in our state.

Helen Applebaum