

I'm a birth mother and my son located me after 50 years. I tried to forget the horror of giving him away. He was one of the high percentage of adopted children that have been abused by sexual and physical abuse in adoptive homes. It's ironic that people are so critically looked at and birth mothers have no rights. The children have a right to find their families of birth. Good or bad. This is one of the last things that is holding out on our society. For what? For people likely will die and never met. Put yourself in the children's place. I saw a grown man cry because his 84 yr old mother passed and his heart was broken due to having no money to buy a ticket to visit his dying mother who he met a few yrs ago. I think that all records should be opened for people look keep me. But Ohio's records just got unsealed and I'm grateful due to meeting my son and grandson and he said mother when I was 72 years old. I could have been dead. So if at all possible unlock those records to deserving kids and their estranged parents.
