I was adopted when i was 2 weeks old by an absolutely incredible family. I had a wonderful childhood and despite a closed adoption, was able to find my biological mother and her family when i was 18. I had very limited information but because she had reached out to so many registries to be reunited, it didn't take long to find a match.

I'm well aware that my story is different than most. I'm very grateful to have found out where i came from, and now i know for myself and my children, crucial information regarding medical history, among other things.

Everyone has a right to their history, their birth certificate. Everyone has a right to their own information.
