

Tweed Airport extension is essential to the economic development of New Haven and our region. Yale University is an international leader in many areas of scientific development, but we do not have the infrastructure for conferences and conventions because there are no direct flights to New Haven. With a proper airport that can support such travel, Yale and New Haven could become a central location for national and international conferences and conventions which would lead to great economic benefit to our region.

Best,

Morris Bell, Ph.D.
Professor Emeritus, Department of Psychiatry
Yale University School of Medicine
Senior Research Career Scientist
VA Rehabilitation Research and Development
Founder and Director
Yale/VA Learning Based Recovery Center