

To whom it may concern from the Connecticut government:

I hope that the note finds you well. As a Yale student, New Haven Democracy School alum, and interested resident of New Haven, I believe strongly that the expansion of Tweed airport would bring tremendous economic benefits to New Haven. getting into and out of New Haven annoys students, visiting parents, and guest visitors to the city as well. Having a better functioning airport that offers real, economical and timely transit options for New Haven residents could really retain Yale students, and viable employers in the community. I know that my dad certainly thought that the lack of functioning airport was a real sign of why New Haven hadn't progressed the way that other cities with similar 20th Century industrial downturns have. It's important to make investments like these for the sake of New Haven's progress and stability in the coming decades.

I would be happy to speak further about why the expansion of Tweed excites Yale students and parents— otherwise, I appreciate your receipt of this note, and thank you for your time.

Best Regards,

Carina Gormley

BA Candidate, Architecture and Urban Studies Yale University, Class of 2020 carina.gormley@yale.edu